ASSOCIAZIONE BIODISTRETTO DEL CASENTINO

c/o Sergio Consorti, via Loscove 22
52014 Poppi (AR)
TEL. 333 2611321

Crossed by the largest river in Tuscany, the Arno, Casentino is rich in forests of chestnut, beech, oak and fir, trees that together make up the natural heritage of the Casentinesi Forests National Park, whose forests are a UNESCO world heritage site.

Casentino is a land of ancient traditions that are still alive today thanks to craftsmanship, such as the famous “Casentino cloth”, a woollen fabric with unmistakable colours, such as the classic orange and green. Also of note is the wrought iron and stone work. The gastronomy offers simple but tasty dishes, recipes of shepherds that refer to transhumance, such as scottiglia or acquacotta; peasant dishes such as potato tortelli and then cheese, ham, honey and the unmissable chestnuts.

The Bio-district of Chianti, the production territory of the prized Chianti Classico wine, was created from the first Italian wine-growing bio-district thanks to a group of producers, technicians, associations and local administrations who signed a pact to support the organic culture and sustainable management practices of the territory. Among the promoters there are some pioneers who have shown that it is possible to produce organically to a very high standard, attaining unique expressions of typicality. Good agronomic practices maintain the beauty and variety of the Chianti landscapes, a healthy environment and rich biodiversity.

ASSOCIAZIONE DEL DISTRETTO BIOLOGICO DI FIESOLE

Via Sermei 1 - 50014 Fiesole (FI)
TEL. 348 7004576 - 348 4350083

Fiesole has a truly unique rural landscape, where Etruscan and Roman remains frame the harmonious and diverse contours of a territory in which, in addition to beauty, attention is paid to a better quality of life.

As evidence of the vitality of the territory, the various components of the Community (farms, tour operators, cultural associations, citizens and the public administration), gathered in the Organic District, create cultural, food and wine initiatives and thematic routes that share the themes of the protection of the land and the enhancement of products of excellence such as oil, wine, honey, saffron.

The Montalbano area, a mountain ridge about 25 km long, which reaches a maximum altitude of 625 m above sea level, covers about 16,000 hectares of land in the heart of the Arno River basin, in the area between the provinces of Florence, Pistoia and Prato. Made famous by the drawings of Leonardo da Vinci, in which we can sometimes see its outlines, it is an ideal place from which to visit all of Tuscany, being in a central position and close to the major arts cities of Florence, Pisa, Lucca and Siena. Set in this lush rolling landscape we find many farms, both organic and not. The production of oil and fine wines predominates, accompanied to a lesser extent by honey, fruit, vegetables, legumes or by other typical local products such as dried figs from Carmignano.

BIODISTRETTO DEL MONTE AMIATA

Via Amiata, 41 - Cinigiano (GR)
TEL. 0564 383324 - 338 1786591

The territory of Monte Amiata and Val d'Orcia is characterized by a distinctive natural and architectural beauty that make its landscape one of its most important economic resources, guiding its population's responsible attitudes towards tourism and organic agriculture. Welcoming tourists who love walking, diving into warm thermal waters, drinking spring water, visiting medieval villages, skiing when it snows or going mushrooming when the time is right, involves the tasting of oil, wine, cheeses, cold cuts from animals raised in the pasture and traditional desserts, with pasta still made by hand in the same restaurants.

Merigar with Mount Amiata in the background

Via di Fugnano 19 (c/o Consorzio della Vernaccia) 53037 San Gimignano (SI)

TEL. 335 254057 - 346 5354675

The territory of the Bio-district of San Gimignano winds through the municipalities of Valdelsa, including ancient cities, nature reserves and the beautiful Tuscan landscape which the Via Francigena crosses through. The production of Vernaccia di San Gimignano DOCG wine, together with that of San Gimignano DOP saffron and extra virgin olive oil are just some of the products that have been cultivated in these bountiful lands since the Middle Ages. The Bio-district of San Gimignano brings together visionary producers who have moved to the area and who, for the sake of biodiversity and sustainability, cultivate cereals and ve-

TEL. 0575 23612 - 349 1919426

Val di Chiana is a large flat area overlooked by Lazio, Umbria and Tuscany. In ancient times it was considered the breadbasket of Etruria, thanks to the fertility of the soil and the richness of its crops. These characteristics make it prime territory for agricultural production, in particular sustainable production for the benefit of the environment and the health of human beings. The Chianina is one of the ancient and important cattle breeds of Italy and owes its name to area where it is raised.

Castiglion Fiorentino and the sunflowers of the Val di Chio

Here the tradition of “eating well and healthy” is still alive, both in the cities and in the countryside which sees a significant presence of agritourism, along with the usual offering of restaurants.

TUSCANY: HARMONY FOR BODY AND MIND

An invitation to discover Tuscany, a region that takes care of its own agricultural and food productions day by day, respecting its natural environment, along with those who inhabit it and those who are discovering it, be it for a day or two, a week, or a lifetime. The beauty of works of art, of buildings which are perfectly set in villages and pleasant landscapes, along the roads that have made the development of local communities possible, the harmony of cultivated landscapes, which are almost as though painted through skilful and respectful work on the earth ... all this forms the basis of organic agri-food productions, grown in natural environments far from contamination by chemical substances. Just one more reason to discover the hidden charms of Tuscany - a destination where guests are truly taken care of, with a wide variety of experiences on offer.

Contact with unspoiled nature is another reason to discover the beauty and the Tuscan way of life.

BIO-DISTRICTS. WHY?

By “Bio-district” we mean a geographically defined area which tends naturally towards the organic: here farmers, citizens, tour operators, associations and public administrations have the sustainable management of natural resources as their chief objective, as required by the organic model of production and consumption. The promotion of both organic products and of the territory itself, with its unique features, are closely connected in terms of reaching their peak economic, social and cultural potential. When a bio-district is created, it brings together a network made up of the natural, cultural and economic resources of a territory, in order to improve them all through local policies geared towards protecting the environment, traditions and local knowledge.

This logic is at the basis of the bio-districts’ success: territorial areas with highly specialized products and a high concentration of the organic supply chain.

But it’s not only about organic farmers, the public and public institutions: schools are also involved in biodistricts, which, through activities and increasingly “green” choices, can shape everyone’s habits. There are also the tour operators who, through eco-trails and rural tourism, can focus on redevelopment and the seasonal adjustment for the tourism sector.

ORGANIC FOOD: DELICIOUS AND HEALTHY

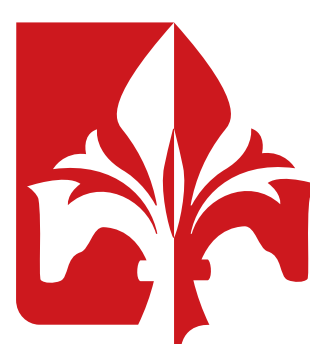

To be defined as such, organic food must necessarily comply with specific criteria, identified and governed by EU regulations and national decrees and certified by the use of a label. It has to be produced on the basis of a type of agriculture that exploits the natural fertility of the soil, promotes biodiversity, and above all avoids the use of synthetic products and genetically modified organisms. Organic foods offers important advantages: it has a natural and authentic taste, it is controlled from the point of view of cultivation and breeding and does not contain substances of chemical origin. To produce it, raw material waste is reduced, biodiversity is respected and environmental impact is reduced.

A concise account of the local bio-districts in Tuscany, their organic and biodynamic products, the land where they were developed, the municipalities that are involved in each district and relevant locations. The journey to discover and enjoy new worlds begins. Excellent products that can be bought and tasted directly on the farm, found in the many stores specialized in Tuscan goods or experienced in quality cooking.
